Chapter 428: Expanding the Eternal Battlefields

A New Challenge

Sung Jin-Woo, ever the perfectionist, recognized that the Eternal Battlefields Realm had room for more participants. The angels and dark angels, while formidable, were not his only creations. To diversify the battles and test the full scope of his power, Sung Jin-Woo decided to include his other divine creations: Apostles of God, Dark Apostles, Heavenly Soldiers, and Dark Heavenly Soldiers.

This decision would ignite an era of monumental clashes where the strength and adaptability of all his creations would be tested to their limits.

The Expanded Roster

1. Apostles of God:

Born from primordial light, these six-winged celestial beings were originally tasked with spreading divine blessings and enforcing divine will.

Though not as powerful as the angels, their disciplined combat style and divine power made them formidable opponents.

They entered the battlefield with a sense of pride, eager to prove that they still held value in Sung Jin-Woo’s divine hierarchy.

2. Dark Apostles:

Forged from primordial darkness, these shadowy beings were cunning, ruthless, and unpredictable.

They thrived in chaotic combat, often overwhelming their opponents with guerrilla tactics and sheer brutality.

3. Heavenly Soldiers:

Originally born from the fruits of the World Tree, these two-to-four-winged warriors were the backbone of the Divine Triad’s forces.

Though weaker than the Apostles and angels, their vast numbers and coordinated strategies made them a crucial part of the battlefield.

4. Dark Heavenly Soldiers:

Created from the fruits of the Divine Trees scattered across the realms, these shadow-infused warriors possessed a second black heart, granting them enhanced endurance and strength.

Their sheer tenacity often allowed them to hold their own against more powerful foes.

The Unified Battlefield

1. A Tiered Competition:

Sung Jin-Woo organized the battles into tiered divisions to ensure fairness. Angels and dark angels often fought amongst themselves, while Apostles, heavenly soldiers, and dark heavenly soldiers competed in their own leagues. Occasionally, mixed battles were held, pitting all tiers against one another to simulate true chaos.

2. Collaborative Battles:

Sometimes, teams were formed across different creations. An angel might fight alongside an Apostle of God, or a dark angel might lead a group of dark heavenly soldiers. These collaborations tested their ability to work together and adapt to unfamiliar strategies.

3. The Cycle of Resurrection:

As with the angels and dark angels, all fallen participants were resurrected after each battle, ensuring that the Eternal Battlefields Realm remained a place of growth rather than loss.

The Spectacle of War

1. Unparalleled Clashes:

The battles became more dynamic and unpredictable with the inclusion of the Apostles and soldiers.

Heavenly soldiers often formed massive phalanxes, holding the line against dark heavenly soldiers who surged forward like an unstoppable tide.

2. The Apostles’ Brilliance:

The Apostles of God and Dark Apostles brought their own unique flavor to the battles. Their mastery of light and darkness created awe-inspiring displays of power, with the battlefield often illuminated by blinding flashes or engulfed in impenetrable shadows.

3. The Angels’ Dominance:

Despite the diversity of participants, the angels and dark angels remained the undisputed champions. Their raw power and divine perfection made them nearly invincible, though the Apostles and soldiers occasionally managed to secure surprising victories.

Sung Jin-Woo’s Amusement

Watching the expanded battles brought a new sense of excitement to Sung Jin-Woo. The diversity of tactics, the clashing of raw power and strategy, and the unpredictable outcomes kept him endlessly entertained.

1. The Thrill of Diversity:

"They are more than just warriors," Sung Jin-Woo mused as he observed the battles. "They are extensions of my will, each with their own strengths and flaws."

2. Unpredictable Victories:

While the angels and dark angels often dominated, there were moments when an Apostle of God or a squadron of heavenly soldiers managed to pull off an unexpected win. These moments brought a smile to Sung Jin-Woo’s face, reminding him that even perfection had its surprises.

The Eternal Cycle Continues

The inclusion of the Apostles and soldiers added a new layer of complexity to the Eternal Battlefields Realm. It was no longer just a contest between angels and dark angels—it was a grand stage for all of Sung Jin-Woo’s creations to prove their worth.

1. A Place of Growth:

The Eternal Battlefields Realm became a crucible where strength was forged and weaknesses were revealed. Every soldier, angel, and Apostle who stepped onto the battlefield emerged stronger, sharper, and more capable.

2. A God’s Pride:

For Sung Jin-Woo, the battlefield was a testament to his power and creativity. Each clash, each victory, and each loss was a reflection of his divine vision.